In my experience publicity is pretty much never worth your time. Tips and tricks leÀÀÀve learned along the way, plus my favorite resource for determining how to price your work. Working for free devalues everyoneéÀÀÀs worth. Need me to pick up your kid from school because youéÀÀÀre stuck at work? I have a hard time saying éÀÀÀno.éÀÀÀ À Àand I feel compelled to help someone who needs it. And I deliver on that promise. Only you can truly determine whether or not a price is worth your time.A Àso crunch some numbers and decide whether or not it is or not! My time is precious. This is my job. Mostly because designers tend to be so secretive about it and nearly every design job is a bit different. The clients that want me to work for free (or nearly free) are always the most work (read: pain in the booty). Your favorite pawn shop owner or employee knows the current price of gold, and usually offers a fair price.Visit Online Gold DealersA quick visit to an online gold dealer is a great way to find the price of your Krugerrand without carrying your investment from store to store. Need me to design a logo for your friendéÀÀÀs company? Disclaimer DoneÀÀÀt hear what leÀÀÀm not saying in this post. So doneÀÀÀt feel bad about charging for your time, your services, and your expertise. HereéÀÀÀs a quote on what it would cost. Not only does the publicity never really pan out as you hope, but it also makes it harder for designers/artists as a collective group to get paid for their work. Direct sales. The Bottom Line It has to be worth your time. ItéÀÀÀs so much more profitable than working for someone else and only getting a small percentage. leÀÀÀm an entrepreneur, freelance designer, wife, and mom of three kids. Some of these things may not make sense for you if you doneÀÀÀt have a large to sell again. Every time. (This "review clause" saved me a lot of design work!) In addition to the estimate for the actual design work, I usually charge the license fee separately. Why are prices so difficult? Nobody wants to work with someone who's hard and unreliable. I tell potential clients that I am known for being always easy to work with and always, always, always on time. In the beginning, I worked like this for some notable companies and I regret it. ? Of course I do. Many of these retailers are able to offer a fair price for your Krugerrand collection, or they will help you find the price for your items. items.

One die is used for the obverse (front, or "heads" side) of the coin, and other is used for the reverse (back, or "tails" side). If there is an issue or flaw with either die, it can lead to errors such as the doubling of design elements or the ...
